Small Codes Are to Be Dropped at Once by Johnson

He Orders Recovery Program Centered on Major Industries
NUISANCE, HE SAYS

85 % of Time Wasted on Business Only 15 % of Nation's Total

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Hugh S. Johnson Friday rejected requests for codes, covering minute industrial groups, which have been jamming the NRA works. A study of his organization, Johnson said, showed that 85 per cent of the time, personnel, money and effort was going to take care of industries and codes which did not affect 15 per cent of the recovery program.

"We're not going to fool with them any longer," he told newsmen. "They can sign the president's re-employment agreement. There are little codes here that do not cover 250 employees which require as much time as the big codes."

Where it can be done, a lot of little separate manufacturing groups will be persuaded, to get into one code covering a general type of product. Otherwise they can go on the voluntary Blue Eagle agreement basis, just like the highly localized service trades—dry cleaners, restaurants, bootblacks and other "little businesses."

The program, Johnson explained, would not only economize money and effort at NRA, leaving officials free to concentrate on really important questions, but would do away with scores and perhaps hundreds of little code authorities all of which cost money to support, money coming out of the pockets of private business.

There are codes for insect exterminators and mopstick makers, codes for corncrib pipes and for ecclesiastical statutory manufacturers. Suspenders, trimmings makers have one not to mention the producers of cereal steels, dog food packages, bird breeders and goldfish breeders, cemetery operators and buttonhole makers.

Few of these are expected to survive Johnson's projected housecleaning.

Husband and Wife in Double Suicide

"Bury Us in Same Box" Says Tragic Note After Quarrel

MOUNT IDA, Ark.—H. C. Whorley, aged 35, farmer who lived on Irons creek, about 20 miles north of Mount Ida, and Mrs. Whorley, 30, killed themselves at their home Friday while their two children, a son, 10, and a daughter, 12, looked on. Both used the same weapon, a pistol, and both died almost instantly.

The children told officers that the couple quarreled at the dinner table when Whorley said he was "going across the creek and get some whisky." Mrs. Whorley remonstrated, it was said, and the two exchanged harsh words.

Whorley had been gone from home only a short time when Mrs. Whorley took her husband's pistol and shot herself. Apparently she died instantly. When the two children were unable to arouse their mother, the boy ran and overtook his father. Whorley returned home immediately and sent his son to the home of a neighbor. The boy had gone only a short distance when the father called to him: "If I never see you again, be a good boy."

Whorley then scribbled the following note:

"My wife has killed herself and I don't know why. Put my children in the House of Correction and bury us in the same box. Do what I tell you."

Picking up the pistol from beside his wife's body, Whorley fired a bullet into his head. When neighbors arrived, they found the two bodies side by side, with Whorley's arm resting on his wife's shoulder.

A pie supper will be held Thursday night, May 17, at Guernsey school house. Proceeds will go to the Sunday school. County candidates will make announcements. Hope String Band will play.

Crosnoe and Boyd Arrested in Fight

Hope Men to Be Arraigned for Scuffle at McCaskill

Charles Crosnoe and Perry Boyd, Hope barber, were arrested late Friday night following a fight at a McCaskill dance in which Boyd received cuts inflicted with a pocket knife.

Both were placed under bond for their appearance Monday morning at 10 o'clock before a McCaskill justice of the peace. The fight, witnesses said, grew out of an argument over remarks by Boyd directed at a girl friend of Crosnoe's.

The argument started in the early part of the night, but was interrupted by City Marshal Sheffield of McCaskill. It was renewed later on the McCaskill-Nashville road where the fight occurred.

Boyd's injuries are not serious.

Stock Regulation Passes Final Vote

Smashing Victory 62 to 13 in Senate, Then to President

Proposed Law Reaches Last Ballot Still in Original Form

HUGE FEDERAL AID 460-Million-Dollar Highway Bill Is Sent to Senate

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The stock market regulation bill was given a smashing 62-to-13 approval by the senate Saturday afternoon.

With that protracted controversy out of the way, the senate went to work on the Glass bill on Federal Reserve loans to industry.

While members of the house rested, senators had been in session since 10 a. m.

The administration stock measure now goes to a conference with the house to adjust differences and prepare the measure for the president's signature.

Long Fight Ends WASHINGTON.—(AP)—After months of controversy and years of investigation, the stock market control bill approached a final vote in the senate Saturday amid last-minute skirmishes over modifications of the 1933 securities act.

The conflict over the market control bill proper was completed and it is ready for a vote in the form desired by its framers, despite repeated and determined efforts to amend it. Meanwhile, spokesmen for the New York Stock Exchange waged a determined effort against it.

Huge U. S. Road Bill WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Representative Whittington, Mississippi Democrat, member of the house roads committee which favorably reported the bill passed Friday by the house, appropriated 460 millions for highway construction, estimated Saturday that one million men will be employed if the measure is enacted into law.

Whittington said the authorization of this fund is more important now than heretofore because for the fiscal year 1935 there is no authorization for federal-aid highway construction.

British Stand Pat on Token Payment

Declare Budget Surplus Doesn't Count, Because of High Taxes

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—Arguments that Great Britain can pay her American war debt because she has a budget surplus were branded Friday as "fallacious" by Sir John Simon, the foreign secretary.

He cited two reasons: "First, because that which lies at the back of the difficulty in connection with these vast international payments is not the question as to whether a particular country has a budget surplus."

"It is an injury done to world trade and world recovery if we are to contemplate the transfer of enormous quantities which we indeed receive in the form of goods but which we are asked to pay back in the form of money."

"Second, it must be borne in mind that, in relation to the national wealth, British taxation last year was at least twice as heavy as the corresponding taxation in the United States."

His remarks were made during a speech at Manchester while newsmen were describing as unfair, indications in Washington that Britain may be considered in default despite her regular "token" payments to the United States.

Sir John's address was interpreted in some quarters as indicating that the British government stands pat on its war debt policy. The Foreign Office Friday night had received no advice from the British ambassador in Washington, Sir Ronald Lindsay.

The London News-Chronicle said: "It is plain that Mr. Roosevelt was jockeyed into Friday's decision against his better judgment. He knows of course that our exclusion from the American money market (as provided under the Johnson act for defaulting nations) will hurt us as little as it will benefit America."

A minority of cabinet ministers were said to favor paying in full, but several editorial writers indicated that the government may not make more than a token installment June 15.

Barrow's Mother Is Turned Loose

Officers Had Expected Son to Visit Her This Mother's Day

DALLAS, Texas.—(AP)—Mrs. Henry Barrow, mother of the notorious Clyde Barrow, was back home on Eagle Ford road Saturday after spending a day and two nights in the custody of Texas rangers.

"They seemed to think Clyde had arranged to visit me on Mother's day and that I would tell them all about it," she said.

The aged woman returned to her home Friday night.

She said two men who told her they were rangers drove her in an automobile to Tyler, where she was taken to the courthouse and questioned at length about her son, whom she had been accused of meeting and aiding upon occasion.

Arab Empire Is to Be War Stake

King Saud Reveals Ambitious Plan to Nations of Europe

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—Driving on Sana, the capital city of Yemen, from three directions with modern military equipment, King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia hopes to complete his conquest in short order and start building a United Arabian empire, his London representatives said Friday.

"War to the finish" against the Imam Yahya of Yemen is the Saudi policy, the London Saudis said, but Europeans and Americans need have no fears that foreigners' interests will be periled.

The largest army of King Ibn Saud, led by his heir, the Emir Feisal, has opened an offensive against Sana, northwest of Sana, the Saudis said. Another division is advancing from Hodeidah, important seaport already captured, and a third has been ordered to approach Sana from the east.

The three-way attack, the Saudis believe, will mean quick conquest of Sana, a city of some 25,000 population.

Barrow and Floyd Sought by U. S. Investigation Bureau

THEY HATED WORK

Governor Murray of Oklahoma Will Make No "Deal" With Floyd

This is the fourth of six absorbing stories telling how bullet, rope, and prison cell have ended the careers of notorious bandits of the past and relating the records and giving detailed descriptions of the "most wanted" criminals of today.

By WILLIS THORNTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

The U. S. Department of Justice and thousands of peace officers all over the country have placed about a dozen names at the top of their list. Each of these targets of the law has a long unpaid score to settle, and on each is being brought to bear new weapons, both physical and legal.

Department of Justice men in Chicago have just received an arsenal of new machine guns more powerful and deadly than any ever used in peace time—guns that will kill at three miles, and pierce bullet-proof vests or glass, or rip straight through a whole automobile engine to find their target.

Passage of 10 new laws by Congress is almost certain, their aim being to give the federal government more power in helping states track down today's interstate criminals.

The department's best men have taken to the field, co-ordinating local authorities in the hunt. The fate of the "most-wanted" men and women today seems certain to be no better than the fate of similar outlaws in the past.

Barrow Ruthless Killer Far up at the head of the Department of Justice's list of wanted criminals stand two young men, scarcely more than boys, each of whom have blazed a trail of murder and lawlessness which forced society to protect itself by stringent means.

Clyde Barrow is only 24 years old, but 12 murders have been ascribed to him within the last two years. To be the finest example of the personally insignificant drugstore cowboy and cheap auto thief who suddenly finds that firearms when used without trace of scruple, give him importance.

A few years ago that is just what Barrow was, and that is what he is essentially today—a cheap hoodlum who never dared anything more desperate than stealing chickens or autos.

His brother, Martin "Bud" Barrow, older by eight years, was considered far tougher than Clyde.

Commits First Murder Clyde had sawed out of the Waco, Texas, jail, but had been returned from Middletown, Ohio.

Though he was a "model" prisoner, he showed his aversion to work by deliberately cutting his foot with an ax so he would not have to do the "hard labor" to which he had been sentenced. A tender-hearted governor paroled him.

A succession of robberies followed almost immediately, and then late one night a Hillsboro, Texas, merchant was awakened by a knock at the door. He recognized the youngsters who stood at the door and said they wanted some guitar strings.

He admitted them. Suddenly they drew guns, forced him to open his safe, and when he had opened it, shot him down in the presence of his horrified wife.

Blaze Trail of Death Their petty loot was $40 in cash and $2500 in jewelry. But the wife of the storekeeper identified the pair as Clyde Barrow and Raymond Hamilton.

They were murderers—marked men—and after that their nervous trigger fingers always closed before they thought.

Murder followed murder as they dodged across the country, evading pursuit and trying to steal a living. At times they separated: once Barrow liberated Hamilton from the Eastham Prison Farm in Texas, lying in ambush for a wood-cutting party, and mowing down guards with a machine gun.

He and Hamilton teamed with one Bonnie Parker, herself a tough gun-girl, and with brother Buck and his wife.

Repeatedly they shot their way out of police traps, using hesitatingly take other men's lives when their own liberties seemed in danger. They romanticized their own careers, took snapshots of themselves in newspaper poses, and Bonnie Parker even wrote

Gettle, and the Kidnap Spot

TOP—William F. Gettle, millionaire Beverly Hills financier and oil man who was kidnapped from his country estate near Los Angeles by two masked gunmen who defied electrically operated gates and a seven-foot stone wall.

BOTTOM—Bound and gagged, William F. Gettle, Beverly Hills oil man, was forced over this seven-foot wall by kidnapers who spirited him away from his Los Angeles country estate. Photo shows how Gettle fell from the wall after being carried up a ladder.

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—(AP)—Confidence that William F. Gettle is still alive was expressed Saturday by Ernest E. Noon, attorney for the family, who is acting as intermediary.

The attorney also announced that an agreement had been reached with authorities to call off the manhunt for the kidnapers until Monday noon.

Letter From Gettle LOS ANGELES, Calif.—(AP)—Reports were current here Saturday that a letter had been received from William F. Gettle, kidnapped Beverly Hills millionaire, by a close friend and business associate.

It also reported that the family attorney had received a note from the kidnapers with definite instructions.

The letter, said to be in Gettle's handwriting, was reported as telling his friend to follow out the demands made by the masked gunmen who roughly kidnapped him early Thursday from his newly-acquired Arcadia estate, 20 miles east of here.

Family Ready to Pay LOS ANGELES, Calif.—(AP)—Release of William F. Gettle from the hands of kidnapers within 24 hours was forecast by authorities Friday night as negotiations for the payment of ransom went on in secrecy.

Ernest E. Noon, the family attorney, who agreed to a ransom demand of $75,000 made by telephone earlier in the day and started a cycle of mysterious activities while all agencies of the law withdrew from the case, said the money was ready and payment would be made as soon as it was determined that the victim was unharmed.

It was said Noon expected the demand would be followed by definite instructions as to how the money should be delivered.

Wife Gets Request While the negotiations apparently were progressing the invalid wife of the victim received a demand for $30,000 Friday night.

Mrs. Gettle, who is recuperating from an attack of pneumonia, collapsed under the increasing tension of the case and fears were expressed for her life. She was reported somewhat improved Friday night. The four Gettle children, all under 10, were taken for a ride in the family automobile during the afternoon, under the alert eyes of a chauffeur and a bodyguard.

New Demand Made Further complicating the situation, a second mysterious telephone call was made to the office of Noon, late in the day, the anonymous informant demanding that if he was "ready to talk" he should put an ad in the personal column of one of the morning papers Saturday.

Starting the series of developments, a telephone call was made to Noon's office Friday morning in which the caller demanded $75,000 and to which Noon reputedly agreed with little hesitation.

The exchange of a millionaire-sized ransom for the life and freedom of the wealthy business man was envisioned as the trust officer of a bank figured in a conference with Noon, and the attorney made several mysterious trips out of his office, once stopping at the bank.

Letter to Wife The letter to the seriously stricken Mrs. Gettle, although arousing doubts in the minds of onlooking officers as to authenticity, threw another iron in the fire. Mailed from San Bernardino, 60 miles east of here, at 6 p. m. Thursday, 18 hours after Gettle had been seized by two smooth-working masked gunmen, it said: "Get $40,000 in used bills in tens and twenties and keep ready. Don't tell the law. 'I'll get in touch with you later.'"

It was written upon cheap paper. The second telephone message to Noon's office, center of the negotiation activities, came while the attorney was out on one of his secret trips.

"Is this Mr. Noon's office?" the anonymous male caller asked when the attorney's secretary, Miss Grace Hundley, answered.

"Is Mr. Noon in?" the caller asked. "He's out but is due back any minute," Miss Hundley answered.

"Just tell him," the voice continued, "that if he is ready to talk he should put an ad in the personal column of one of the morning papers Saturday."

Before Miss Hundley could reply the man hung up.

Sometime before the second telephone call came, Noon said he had the money ready and would make payment as soon as he ascertained that Gettle would be freed without injury.

Your Mother
You're wearing a flower tomorrow. For the mother you hold so dear. Whose goodness and tenderest love, has followed you year after year. From the time that you sat on her knee,
Till the time that you left her to roam, There's always been one who was thinking of you, who was waiting for you, who was watching each step,
That mother you have at home. Your life may be filled with other things,
Your work, your pleasures, your friends, But she is the one who watches each step,
Whether upward or downward trend. She always knows if you're happy or sad,
If you're discouraged, downhearted and blue.
You may think there are others loyal. But none like that mother so true. Then whether your flower be white, Or red so bright and gay,
But aside all other thoughts, And think of your mother today. If she's gone, give thanks for the things she did,
Before she went away. If she's here do everything you can. To make her happy each day.
For no matter if she's here, Or gone to her home above, Nothing else will ever be so dear, As the gift of your mother's love.

illiterate poetry about a fictitious "Suicide Sal."
Brother is Killed
Last July the gang shot its way clear of a posse at Plattie City, but Marvin was wounded in the head. When their next brush with the law came at Dexter, Ia., Marvin was again shot, this time fatally.
But Clyde Barrow, Hamilton, and Bonnie Parker escaped. Rumors of their crop up every time there is a shooting scrape in any part of the country, for the characteristic of this gang has been never to "hole up" anywhere, but to keep on the move.
"Pretty Boy" Floyd is a horse of another color. He is no hysterical, romantic kid, but a mature and desperate man, crafty and calculating.
By a dozen murders, Floyd, too, has put himself in the position where he has nothing to lose by killing, and freedom to gain.
Floyd is a bandit in the Oklahoma tradition of the Dalton Boys and Al Jennings. Though he has operated all over the country, and might appear any place, anytime, he has a "base" in the wild hill country of eastern Oklahoma, around Sallisaw.
There Floyd has many friends, who are glad to help in concealing him from the law. His wife and young son live in an attractive bungalow in Tulsa, and he has visited them there in direct defiance of pursuers.
Bandit Hated Work
Floyd never went beyond the sixth grade. He hated work, like all outlaws. He hung around the poolrooms and small-town joints of Calumet.
He drifted to the harvest fields, but had no stomach for toil, and a St. Louis payroll stickup looked better to him. He served four years for this crime, and in 1929, on his release, blossomed out as a full-fledged desperado and bank robber.
After several "jobs," he was caught in Ohio and sentenced to 15 years for a Toledo bank robbery. This sentence still hangs over his head, unserved, for he escaped on his way to the state penitentiary.
Lightning on the draw, Floyd is also tricky, and has killed at least two peace officers by distracting their attention while they had the drop in him, then shooting them down.
Surrender Offers Fail
In the Oklahoma hills, Floyd has become a legend, and there are tall "Robin Hood" tales of his benefactions to the poor.
His holdups are almost always pulled off in flamboyant style without masks, and though he usually carries and can operate a machine gun, all his murders have been done with the automatic.
Several efforts have been made by friends of Floyd, who realize that he will be shot sooner or later, to arrange his peaceful surrender, on the government's promise that he will not have to pay the penalty for his murders. But Governor Murray has turned down all such offers, adding grimly, "We'll get him."

Floyd and Barrow have "gotten away with it" for a long time. The reckoning must be drawing closer every day.

low cost apartments.
The plan involves expenditure of hundreds of millions of private capital, comparatively little by the government. The use of a mutual insurance principle would allow the lenders of these millions to guarantee, with government help, their own loans.
By thus reducing the apparent risk of lending, great amounts of new money are expected to be made available, and government supervision will help to keep interest rates down.
The plans have been worked and reworked by presidential advisers. The broad aspects of the plan were authoritatively said to encompass the creation of a huge insurance agency under the government, originally supplied with government credit and later supported by private money.
This corporation would be headed by directors chosen from among present government heads, and might contain some individuals from private finance and industry.
The agency could insure both loans for reconditioning and for new building, thus taking into its fold both the plans for emergency stimulation of repairs, remodeling and modernization, and the long range plans for creation of new homes, farm and city.
Another insurance activity would be the guarantee of investment in building and loan associations. Savings of investors, mostly small, in building and loan associations total almost $10,000,000 contributed by approximately 12,000,000 investors.

The minutes of the secretary were read and approved, then reports were heard from chairmen of committees.
The program was led by the president which had as its topic "Better and More Attractive Homes."
She was assisted by Mrs. Rufus Britt, Miss Forrest Ruggles, and Miss Griffin.
Plans were discussed for a canning kitchen and a committee was appointed to investigate. After which Miss England directed various games and contests.
A demonstration of cheese and soap making was given by Miss Griffin.
The next meeting will be in June at the home of Mrs. John Reed at which jelly making and testing juices will be the topic.

Ozan
The Ozan-St. Paul Home Demonstration club held its regular monthly meeting, May 4, at the home of Mrs. Floyd Matthews. The house was dedicated to order by the president and immediately shown into the kitchen where demonstration on cheese and soap making was given by Miss Griffin.
Afterwards the business session was held. Twenty-two members, two new members and four visitors were present.
Mrs. Ben Stuart led the devotion closing with the Lord's prayer. Reports from various committees were heard and the following leaders made these reports:
Home management: 2 rooms papered, 7 rooms painted, 21 new kitchen articles such as built in cabinets, stoves, rugs, cookers, cooking utensils, etc.

Storks Win 11 to 6 With Rallies in Sixth and Seventh

Fifth and seventh inning rallies by the Storks Friday afternoon at Fair Park sent the league-leading Texarkana firemen to their second defeat this season, 11 to 6.
The bombardment in the fifth netted the locals six runs. The Storks scored four in the seventh.
"Blackie" Elliott pitched in rare form, allowing the visitors seven hits. The Storks pounded out 12 off Harris. With the bases loaded on several occasions, Elliott bore down with a fast breaking curve to pull out of the pinches.
The fielding feature of the game was Hall's catch of a long fly to deep center.
The Storks play at Atlanta Sunday afternoon.

NEWS CHURCHES

OUR LADY OF GOOD HOPE
Sixth Sunday After Easter
9:30—Catechetical instructions.
10:30—Sunday prayers.
7:30—Services honoring Mother; song "A Flower for You Mother Dear"; a sermon, Benediction with the Most Blessed Sacrament and prayers of the Novena to the Holy Ghost.
Every night this week, the Novena in honor of the Holy Ghost, will be observed at 7:30.

FIRST METHODIST

Morning church service at 10:55 o'clock. The theme of the pastor's sermon will be "Motherhood—An Ideal." The organ numbers will be "Meditation," by Morrison, and "Lullabye," by Thompkins. The choir will sing an anthem.
The evening service will be at 8 o'clock. At this service the pastor will continue the series of evening sermons on the Ten Commandments with a sermon on "The Lord's Day." The organ numbers will be "Canticle in Bb," by Hosmer, and "Evening Idyll," by Rothleder. The choir will sing, "Living For Jesus." The story of "Jesus Savior, Pilot Me" will be told and the congregation will join in singing it.

The young people's evening group meetings will be at 7:15 o'clock. The senior group will meet at the church at 6 o'clock and have their evening meal together.
The Wednesday evening prayer meeting will be at 8 o'clock.

FIRST BAPTIST

Wallace R. Rogers, Pastor

The various departments of the Sunday school will meet at 9:45 for study, and at 10:55 the church will assemble for the regular morning worship. The pastor will preach from the subject, "What Can I Believe?" at the morning hour, and "The Potter's Wheel" at the evening hour.
A very important question will come before the Men's Bible Class and the Young Men's Bible Class at the Sunday school hour, and it is hoped that a large number will be present to have a part in the decision made. It is imperative that these classes find some solution to the problem of a meeting place until the new building can be had.

Homecoming Day for Washington

Indications Are That Large Number Former Citizens Will Attend

A large number of former citizens and members of their families are expected to visit Washington Sunday to attend the 12th annual Homecoming celebration, always held on Mother's Day Sunday.
Plans have been completed for the occasion. Church services will be held at the Baptist with the Rev. Carroll D. Wood, Haynesville, Louisiana, pastor, in the pulpit. Night services will be held at the Presbyterian church and one of the visiting pastors will be asked to preach, it is stated by Dr. J. C. Williams. There are always a number of visiting pastors in Washington on Mother's Day and it has been the custom for some years to have one of them speak or preach at the night services as well as the morning.
The cemetery has received the attention of the cemetery committee and the public in general and the streets and lots about town have been cleaned off by mayor's order.
All former citizens or others who would like to attend are asked to be present for the 12th Homecoming Day without further invitation as personal invitations are not going out this year due to the fact that there are many whose names are not on the records previously kept and who, therefore, would not receive the personal invitation.

Life of Villa at Saenger Sunday

Wallace Beery Plays Role of Mexico's Famous Hero

Wallace Beery and Katherine DeMille in "Viva Villa!"

loves of Pancho Villa, the great Mexican war lord who was the world's outstanding figure in the decade preceding the World War, it combines spectacle and human elements in a manner reminiscent of that great classic of all time, "The Birth of a Nation." This weeks Liberty gives the picture 4 stars.

Villa, whose assassination in 1923 shocked the world, rose from peonage and slavery to become the enemy of the rich, the friend of the poor, the savior of Mexico and one of the great historical figures of the ages.

"Viva Villa!" is the first biography to reach the screen that concentrates on the human side of the subject, while deftly interpolating such mighty spectacle as has seldom, if ever, been filmed before.
With Beery, besides the Misses Wray and De Mille, and Walthall and Erwin, is a notable cast that includes Leo Carrillo, Donald Cook and George E. Stone.

Giants Beaten by 2 Dean Brothers

Dizzy Wins on Wednesday—Paul Defeats Hubbell on Friday

ST. LOUIS, (P)—Paul Dean, young member of the Cardinals' pitching brothers, gained a brilliant 10-inning victory over Carl Hubbell, New York's ace southpaw Friday to lead St. Louis to a 3-to-2 victory and to third place in the National League standings.
Each pitcher allowed nine hits; Dean walked three and fanned five to Hubbell's one pass and seven strikeouts but the St. Louisian was more expert and scattering the blows. The victory, incidentally, gave the Dean family a clean sweep over the Giants as brother Dizzy shut them out Wednesday.
The triumph was the Cardinals' fifth in a row, including three over the world's champions, and their 12th in their last 13 games. It broke a tie with New York to give them undputed possession of third place in the standing and virtual tie with Pittsburgh for second place a half-game behind Chicago.
